FIELD TRIP TO THE GOWER

Sunday, August 9th

First stop was the 14th century Weobley Castle built by the de la Bere family and overlooking the windswept salt marshes. Rob immediately picked up an energy line outside which led to another of those fascinating vortexes.

It was so powerful that some started to feel queasy whilst standing on it and others fought hard to hold onto their pendulums! Other members couldn't wait to get into the castle, stopping in amazement and some trepidation, at the sight of a huge swarm of bees clustered on the brickwork.

Later, with Rob in the lead, members picked up some negative energy in two of the smaller recesses but on the whole the castle had a pleasant atmosphere.

After lunch we moved on to see the menhir known as Sam(p)son's Jack. This is situated in a hawthorn hedge, on the edge of a field in Windmill Farm, Llanrhidian and can be viewed with permission of the owner. Almost immediately on entering the field we could feel the energy emanating from this beautiful white stone (sometimes known as the 'rice pudding' stone because of its texture.) After dowsing we concluded that it was around 12 feet tall but that some 6 feet were buried in hedge and soil.

There was some discussion as to whether the stone had a male or female energy - the jury is still out! After viewing this ancient guardian, the group split up, some to carry on to see other standing stones in the area. The rest of the group went on to see the castle at Loughor or Leucarum in Latin.

The castle, overlooking the River Loughor (Llwchr in Welsh and Leucara in Latin) was established by Roman soldiers to protect an important communications route. Time and weather closing in meant we didn't really have time to do much dowsing. (Due to lack of space further historical notes can be found at <http://www.castlewales.com>)

ROB HEMMING

By Linda Griffiths

Rob (76) has been dowsing since he was 2 years old and began demonstrating his dowsing skills in hospital. He dowsed where certain toys were, and the nurses realized he was able to do this even though he couldn't actually see the toys.

Once out of hospital he continued dowsing, beginning with a small springy stick graduating to a larger one, a pendulum (a conker on a string) and then a forked stick. An elderly lady gypsy helped him develop his skills, calling him 'the gifted fair-haired one'! He learned how to check (amongst other things) whether an energy line was "a good'un" or "a bad'un".

He also discovered that a line of energy could be created just by looking at something - she'd ask "What am I looking at?" and Rob was able to find the line and follow it along to what she had been looking at.

Apparently anything can be found by dowsing: energy lines, electricity, water, sound plus anything that can be dowsed on the ground, can be map dowsed - it's all vibration. Everything gives out a vibration and over the years Rob has dowsed 100s including that given off by trees. He described how you could step away from a tree and dowse to see how far the vibration went out.

Rob described how astronauts have vibrating platforms to help keep their muscles toned, and that turkeys put on a vibrating platform grow twice the size. One of the audience, Jim, told us that there is a machine available (a Shiva machine) that vibrates the body and makes you fit and well.

Later Rob answered questions ranging from earth energies, geopathic stress, crop circles, stone circles to how to dowse a house to see if there were any energies present?

We heard how to approach the task and the type of questions to ask, we may find an energy line - but is it harmful for the person living there? Which way is the energy flowing from? Is it manmade or natural? Rob informed us that electric transformers, telephone and radio masts (electrical vibrations) have a detrimental effect on people and electrical vibrations are one of the worst.

He described ways of 'curing' the problem using crystals or a wire coil. Rob prefers using crystals rather than metal spikes or pins, because a crystal will just neutralize the energy for 40-50 yards beyond the property, while a metal spike will divert the energy (which would not be good for neighbours).

Rob told us how to make a coil using copper wire, preferably single strand covered in blue casing, and suggested a simple way to twist the wire by putting one end in a vice and the other in an electric drill then one quick flick of the trigger would be sufficient. This twisted strand could then be coiled into the desired size.

Most modern homes are 'alive' today with all the electronic appliances that are in them and Rob explained it could take 4-7 years before the effects of detrimental energy would manifest as illness in the body. He described how to wrap a spiral of copper wire around the cables of appliances like freezers, fridges and TV's to neutralize the effects of the electro-magnetic forces that are there when they are switched on. Rob also explained how ghosts or spirit energies can also cause problems in houses, and they can travel down energy lines or water lines and live on the power of the energy line.

If a line crossed an old battlefield or murder site for instance, all those energies would be attracted to the line and could travel along the line and into a house. Rob went on to describe how, as dowsers, it was up to us to keep dowsing until we found out which energies were causing problems, then dowse to find out what would help neutralize or get rid of the problem, dowsing to find out what size crystal or coil to use etc.

Rob demonstrated how a crystal can neutralize the energy on a line that flows through the hall. Great talk Rob! Thanks very much.

While we were discussing what could protect us from detrimental electrical energies, Brian Williams told us about a 'Harmonizer' which can be stuck on the back of a mobile phone for protection and is available for about £10 from Kindred Spirit 01752 762970.

Rob described how to neutralize electro magnetic forces from appliances by wrapping a spiral of copper wire around the cable of an appliance.....

Here's an idea (not mine) - Would it be easier to wrap one spiral around the wire at source, where the electricity comes into the house, thus protecting everything in the house, instead of having to protect every appliance individually?

Question: Would putting one copper spiral at the point where the electricity comes into the house be as effective as putting one on each appliance?

If you get a yes to this, go on to ask: 1. Is it best for the copper spiral to be put before the meter? 2. Is it best for the copper spiral to be put after the meter? Send your answers to Linda Griffiths (contact details at end. Let's see if we can come up with a consensus!)

PETER GIBSON – Archaeological Dowsing

By Linda Griffiths

Using visual aids and other equipment Peter showed that Archaeological Dowsing is a lot cheaper than using radar or Geophysical machines. Dowsing can penetrate into deeper layers than radar machines.

Peter always includes marker flags, tent pegs, dowsing rods, pendulum, compass, a long tape measure and clip-board with pencil attached in his list of essential equipment. Usually he would map-dowse an area first and he described how 'field observation' or 'field archaeology' could help find areas which would be of interest such as differences in grass growth on fields.

He also showed us how to measure our pace, so that if we hadn't got a tape measure with us, we could still get a rough idea of the dimensions of a site. Peter has dowsed in various parts of the country and told us about working for the Aura-soma company, helping to find the purest water, a place for a meditation space and making sure that buildings were not sited on detrimental energy lines, and using slides described some of his findings- a Saxon area (with detrimental energies), a Roman temple, a Roman settlement or army camp and an Iron Age area.

Peter demonstrated how to search an area by dowsing our meeting place. He discovered the remains of a wall under the floor, asked questions to find out what it had been made of, how tall it was and if it was an internal or external wall.

The wall was apparently part of a small enclosure, and through his questions, we discovered there had been a farmhouse 20 metres away.

Peter then described, with slides, dowsing his own cottage and surrounding area including finding a malt house, old cottages and 10 labyrinths – one of which dated back to 1200bc, and three of the other labyrinths dating 690ad, 1468 and 1690.

Peter shared some recent dowsing that he and some friends had been doing to help find the remains of vessels (now hulks) that had been beached on the banks of the River Severn, and explained how, with their dowsing rods, they had been able to reach parts in the reeds that would have been inaccessible to electronic equipment.

This enabled them to find the remains of a rowing boat with six seats, which apparently caused a bit of excitement among the clients they were working for, as the clients knew of the existence of 2 such vessels, and had previously found one, but had unable to find where the second hulk was. (three cheers for dowsing!!)

All through his talk, Peter gave us examples of the questions to ask and the line of thought to adopt – for instance if you had discovered a farm, what sort of things would you expect to be going on in the area? Did it have a piggery?

Was there any accommodation for workers on the site? Was there a well? Was there sacred area on the site? and so on, and he stressed the importance of making notes and keeping a record of your findings which could include a sketch of the site. He very kindly gave Jennifer a copy of the 'question sheet' he takes out with him, which she has offered to copy for those who'd like one. *NB Talk by Robin Heath –Megalithic Sites in Wales will be reported in next newsletter.
